Join The Library For A Revolutionary Trip To Paris

The Library of Virginia Foundation is offering a special "revolutionary" travel experience to Paris in the fall of 2003. During a memorable week in the French capital, from November 1 through 9 travelers will explore the places where Thomas Jefferson, Benjamin Franklin and Supreme Court Justice John Marshall lived, worked and exchanged ideas with their Parisian counterparts and fellow supporters of the revolutionary cause.

The Hôtel Regina will serve as the base for the stay in Paris with excursions to Palais Royal, meeting place of fashionable 18thcentury Paris, and the magnificent chateau and gardens of Versailles.

Highlights of the trip will include lunch at Le Procope, Paris' oldest café, dinner in a private home with French descendants of the American Revolution and an excursion to Nîmes to see the Maison Carrée, the model used by Jefferson in designing Virginia's Capitol. The tour also allows ample free time for exploring Paris.

Art historian Alice Jouve, co-author with her husband, Daniel, of Paris: Birthplace of the U.S.A, will join the tour. A longtime Parisian and former Bostonian, she earned her M.A. from the Middlebury Graduate School of French in France and is a former faculty member of the Sweet Briar College Junior Year in France.

The Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities co-sponsors this trip for those with an interest in Jefferson, the American Revolution and the shared heritage of France and the United States. To place a reservation or learn more about the Thomas Jefferson & The Founding Fathers in Paris trip, please contact Academic Arrangements Abroad at 212-514-8921 or trips@arrangements abroad.com.

MARY BETH McINTIRE TO DIRECT FOUNDATION

The Library of Virginia is pleased to announce that Mary Beth McIntire joined the Library as executive director of the Library of Virginia Foundation on January 10. McIntire will direct all aspects of the Foundation including development, implementation and oversight of the Foundation's fund development plan and the Library Shop.

McIntire came to the Library from United Way Services in Richmond where she has served for the last four years as assistant vice president. Prior to that she served as director of development for Aylett Country Day School. She holds an MBA from Virginia Commonwealth University and a BA from James Madison University. She is a member of the Virginia Association of Fund Raising Executives.

Virginia Heritage Project Links Commonwealth's Repositories

The Virginia Heritage Project offers researchers a comprehensive method for searching across the Commonwealth of Virginia for documents, manuscripts and papers residing in a variety of participating institutions. For the last two years, the Library of Virginia has been adding finding aids of its archival and manuscript collections to the Virginia Heritage Project, a database of finding aids from special collections and archival repositories throughout Virginia. A $250,000 grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities funded the creation of the database. Currently, twenty institutions are contributing finding aids to the database. As of December 8, 2002, the database consisted of 4,514 guides. Of these guides, the Library of Virginia has 486 in the database. In contrast to other databases, this database is based on Encoded Archival Description (EAD), an emerging archival standard, rather than Machine Readable Cataloguing (MARC).

MARC was designed for the cataloging of books, not archival material. Consequently, a MARC record can only include a summary of the archival or manuscript collection's contents and not the box and folder listing, which researchers use for finding and requesting pertinent material. EAD, was designed exclusively for archival finding aids and can be used for finding aids shorter than one page or longer than a thousand pages.

The database allows for the keyword searching of entire finding aids across institutions. This function is important considering that many personal and family papers have been spread among several of Virginia's archival institutions. A search for the Jerdone family, for example, reveals collections at The College of William & Mary as well as at the Library of Virginia.

Institutions and libraries participating in the Virginia Heritage Project are:

College of William and Mary, Colonial Williamsburg Foundation, George Mason University, James Madison University, Library of Virginia, Medical College of Virginia, Old Dominion University, University of Virginia Health Sciences Library, University of Virginia

Law Library, University of Virginia Special Collections, Virginia Center for Digital History, Virginia Commonwealth University, Virginia Historical Society, Virginia Military Institute, Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Virginia State University, Virginia Union University, Washington and Lee University Law School, Washington and Lee University Leyburn Library and Wytheville Community College.

This project is one of several consortium databases based on EAD in the United States, including the Online Archive of California, the Texas Archival Resources Online and the Online Archives of New Mexico. When EAD was created, its developers envisioned a database of archival finding aids from special collections and archives from around the world. The Virginia Heritage Project is a small step in reaching this goal. The site can be reached directly by using the following link: http://www.lib.virginia.edu/vhp/

PETS HELP PROMOTE SUMMER READING PROGRAM

Books and Pets: Our Friends for Life was the theme of the Virginia statewide summer reading program for 2002—and more than 165,000 children showed their love for reading and pets by registering to take part in the program. More than 20,000 teens came to the Reading Rescue and read books to benefit animal shelters and other animal rescue organizations in a related theme for middle and high school students.

The Smithfield Library employed Buddy, a black Labrador reading buddy, who listened to children read during the summer. Buddy is trained and certified by Therapy Dogs International and is owned by Carol Blankenship, who offered his services to the library for the summer.

Emma Jean Brady, branch manager said, "Children are not embarrassed to read to a dog... it's a wonderful program, especially for children who are slow readers." This was just one of many creative ways that libraries celebrated the special connection that children have with their favorite books and their favorite pets.

Many libraries adopted pets for the summer and kept them in their children's room. Hamsters, gerbils, guinea pigs, fish and a host of other furry friends could be seen in Virginia libraries throughout the summer. Veterinarians were invited to speak on pet care, and of course, lots of pet shows contributed to the fun.

Libraries received materials from the Library of Virginia valued at more than $75,000 to help them bring the joy of reading to children in their communities. These posters, bookmarks, reading records, certificates, stickers and stamps enlivened the program and helped libraries promote reading.

In addition to these two programs, the Library of Virginia encouraged libraries to use teens as resources through the "I'm Making a Difference" teen volunteer program. Approximately 40 libraries used teen volunteers in a variety of roles throughout the summer and rewarded them with a t-shirt imprinted with the "I'm Making a Difference" slogan and a graphic image of a large "eye." Several hundred hours of teen volunteer work were recorded by public libraries, and teens were able to learn job skills and make a difference in their communities.

The theme for the Library of Virginia's 2003 Summer Reading Program is Wolfin' Down Books @ Your Library. Workshops on the 2003 Summer Reading Program attended by 333 public library staff representing 74 of Virginia's 90 public library systems were held in three locations last November.

Senator Nick Rerras, of Norfolk, and his daughter, Helena, enjoy the Library of Virginia's legislative reception. Even meteorologist's predictions of five to eight inches of snow did not stop the Library from hosting its annual legislative reception on January 16. The reception, which is underwritten by the Library of Virginia Foundation, attracted dozens of legislators, librarians and Library Board members and trustees from across the state. Secretary of Education Belle S. Wheelan and Governor Mark Warner were among the distinguished guests. Sheryl Warner and The Southside Homewreckers and Low Cotton with special guest Ron Curry donated their musical talents to the evening.

Preston Huff Leaves To Take NARA Position

Calling it the most difficult decision of his professional career, C. Preston Huff recently submitted his resignation as director of the Records Management and Imaging Services Division of the Library of Virginia. He will be working with the National Archives and Records Administration in Fort Worth, Texas, as the assistant district administrator for the Southwest District, which includes Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Arkansas.

During Huff's tenure the Records Management and Imaging Services Division (RMISD) moved into the Library of Virginia building at 800 East Broad Street and the State Records Center at 1997 Charles City Road. He reorganized the Commonwealth's records management program to include: participation in the Council on Technology Services (COTS) and establishment of the State Records Center as a premier records center with a national reputation. RMISD received the Iron Mountain Award for Excellence in Records Management (Government) for 2001 as a leader in all areas of records management.

Due to the critical nature of records management, the Library received permission to fill Huff's position. The Library is conducting a nationwide search for a replacement.

Support the Library of Virginia With Your Ukrop's Golden Gift Certificate

Ukrop's Super Markets started this year's Golden Gift program on February 3, 2003. Until March 29th, if you use your Valued Customer Card when you shop at Ukrop's, your purchase totals will be tallied. In May, you will receive a Golden Gift certificate showing the total points earned (equal to dollars spent).

The Library of Virginia Foundation is a participating organization and will receive a percentage of dollars based on the number of points contributed by our supporters. We hope you will choose the Library of Virginia as the recipient of your certificate so that we can give more solid financial assistance to the Library's mission and programs. You may bring your Golden Gift certificate to the front desk in the Library's lobby or send it to Melinda Skinner, Library of Virginia Foundation, 800 East Broad Street, Richmond, VA 23219-8000.

When you give your certificate to a local non-profit organization, you give back to your community. This is a great way to support your Library of Virginia.

More Branches Added To Family Tree

Are you researching your family's history? If so you know that the Library of Virginia has a wealth of material containing genealogical information. Among these holdings are records of colonial and state governments, copies of extant court records such as wills, deeds, orders and marriage bonds; church records; personal papers; Bible records; business records; organization records; cemetery records; and genealogical notes and charts. The Library also has numerous maps and printed sources on genealogical research and Virginia history.

Now the Library of Virginia has made available for patron research the genealogical files in the Nan Overton West Papers. These research files were the principal resource material Nan West used to write The Wests and the Rays and Allied Lines: Southern Families from the Colonies to Texas and The Overtons: 700 Years with Allied Families From England to Virginia, Kentucky, and Texas.

The papers contain detailed information concerning the Overton, West and Ray families and allied families. Research files exist for the following Overton allied family surnames: Bickley, Booker, Bosley, Briscoe, Brockman, Brooks, Burch, Carr, Clough, Crook, Farrar, Gardiner, Garland, Garnett, Gerard, Glover, Grundy, Harratt, Harris, Howerton, Jennings, Jewell, Lawson, Leake, McCarty, Muscoe, Poindexter, Shipp, Slye, Swain, Taylor, Terrell, Waters and Whitworth. West allied family surnames are: Ashley, Berry, Boatner, Culver, Egner, Martin, Norris, Sanford, Smith, Swain, Ward and Wyatt. Ray allied family surnames include: Caldwell, Culpepper, Dean, Gillespie, Grant, Harrison, Lee, Peek, Richards, Tatum, Wyatt and Young.

To access the finding aid, visit the Library of Virginia's homepage at http://www.lva.lib.va.us/, click on "What We Have," then click on "Archives and Manuscripts Catalog," do a keyword search for Nan Overton West, and then select the "hit" for Nan Overton West. If you then select "Finding Aid" at the top of the screen, you will find a more complete description of the collection.

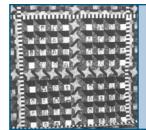

Collection material can be accessed in the manuscripts reading room at the Library of Virginia. For more information please contact Archives Reference staff at (804) 692-3888 or at archdesk@lva.lib.va.us.

Library Awards Circuit Court Grants

The Library of Virginia, through the Virginia Circuit Court Records Preservation Program, recently awarded 21 grants to 18 localities totaling $182,887. These grants included money to provide conservation and preservation to historic court records, perform archival processing of loose court papers prior to reformatting, conversion of paper records to digital images, the purchase of microfilm reader/printers and the purchase of theft or fire security systems for courthouse record rooms.

The next round of grant applications are due at the Library of Virginia by 5:00 PM on April 15, 2003. Before submitting an application, please contact either Amy Judd, 804-692-3601, or Glenn Smith, 804-3604.

This America's Promise Quilt was created by children enrolled in the 2001 Gift of a Lifetime (GOAL) Program, a reading program for parents and children in White Stone, Virginia. The guilt includes photographs of the 52 children, red and white striped fabric borders, gold stars and books and other symbols of American unity and resolve. The quilt was displayed at the Pentagon and then journeyed to the White House in late 2002.

WRVA Radio Collection Ready for Use

The business files, historical files and photographs of the WRVA Radio collection are now available at the Library of Virginia for use by researchers.

WRVA of Richmond, Virginia, aired its first broadcast on November 2, 1925, and was considered the "Voice of Virginia" for many decades. In addition to local, national and world news broadcasts, WRVA featured such programs as the Corn Cob Pipe Club, the Old Dominion Barn Dance, the Sunshine Hour, Calling All Cooks and the Quiz of Two Cities. WRVA announcers included Harvey Hudson, Sam Carey, Alden Aaroe, Lou Dean, Lewis Martin, Tim Timberlake and many others.

The WRVA Radio Collection spans 75 years and documents the history of WRVA, the role the station played in Virginia and Richmond for more than half-a-century and the development of radio in Virginia and the United States. The collection is rich in material on the station's original owners, tobacco manufacturers Larus & Brother Company.

The collection also includes numerous sound recordings, but these are closed indefinitely for preservation and conversion purposes.

An online finding aid is accessible through the Library of Virginia's homepage at http://www.lva.lib.va.us/. Click on "What We Have," "Archives and Manuscripts Catalog," do a keyword search for "WRVA" then select the "hit" for WRVA, you will be taken to the catalog record for the collection. If you then select "Finding Aid" at the top of the screen, you will be taken to a container listing and a more complete description of the collection.

Collection material can be accessed in the manuscripts reading room at the Library of Virginia. For more information please contact Archives Reference staff at (804) 692-3888 or by electronic mail at <archdesk@lva.lib.va.us>.

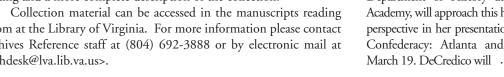

MOC Annual Lectures Start March 13

The War Hits Home: Confederate Society at War, the Museum of the Confederacy's 25th Annual Evening Series Lectures, co-sponsored by the Library of Virginia, will evaluate the effects of the Civil War on the people and communities within the Confederacy. Featuring presentations from respected historians and scholars from across the country, the lectures will begin by using specific Southern cities as case studies to draw conclusions on the impact of war in Southern communities. The final lecture will consider one of the most profound consequences of the war on the Confederate home front—the disruption of slavery as the result of the Emancipation Proclamation. All lectures begin at 5:30 PM and will be held at the Library of Virginia's lecture hall on Thursday March 13, Wednesday March 19, and Wednesday March 26.

Due to limited seating, reservations are required and should be made by calling the Museum at (804) 649-1861. Free parking is available at the Library of Virginia's parking garage located on Broad and 9th Streets. The lectures are $5 to the public and free to Museum members and Library of Virginia donors.

Dr. Brian Steel Wills, professor and chair of the Department of History and Philosophy at the University of Virginia's College at Wise, will kick off the series on March 13, with the lecture "The War Hits Home: The Civil War in Eastern Virginia." Drawn from his latest book of the same title, Wills will speak on how the presence of the Confederate and Union armies affected the people of the small town of Suffolk, Virginia. Author of numerous works relating to the American Civil War, Wills is best known for his award-winning 1992 biography of Nathan Bedford Forrest and his talks to the Civil War Roundtables.

As one of the busiest and most influential wartime cities, Richmond has been the subject of much writing about the impact of the Civil War. Dr. Mary DeCredico, chairman of the Department of History at the U.S. Naval Academy, will approach this history from a fresh perspective in her presentation "Arsenals of the Confederacy: Atlanta and Richmond" on March 19. DeCredico will ...see MOC, pg. 7

MOC... compare and contrast the conditions of these two large and industrial cities, both during the mobilization for war and the war itself. DeCredico is the author of Patriotism For Profit: Georgia's Urban Entrepreneurs and the Confederate War Effort and is currently working on a book about wartime Richmond.

"How effective was the Emancipation Proclamation?" "Did it Really free anyone or was it merely a self-serving war measure?" This controversial issue will be considered in the final lecture, "The Great Emancipator? A Discussion about Abraham Lincoln and Emancipation," on March 26, as four scholars with differing viewpoints address this complex issue. Dr. Thomas DiLorenzo, professor of economics at Loyola College in Maryland and author of the current best-selling book The Real Lincoln, builds on a growing literature that casts doubts on the motives and effects of Lincoln's proclamation. Dr. William C. Harris, professor of history at North Carolina State University and author of With Charity For All: Lincoln and the Restoration of the Union argues that the effects of the Proclamation were real and Lincoln's motives were genuine.

Dr. Ludwell H. Johnson, a respected historian and longtime Lincoln critic. He is emeritus professor of history at the College of William and Mary, where he taught for nearly 40 years. Participants Explore Trust in Government

The Library of Virginia, the Jepson School of Leadership Studies at the University of Richmond and Leadership Metro Richmond cosponsored "A Dialogue on Trust in Government" on the morning of February 4 at the Library of Virginia. Kenneth P. Ruscio, dean of the Jepson School of Leadership Studies, and Joanne B. Ciulla, professor of leadership studies at the Jepson School, led the discussion.

The dialogue touched on the decline of trust among members of society in general, and between citizens and government in particular. The speakers emphasized that democracy as a system of government depends on a degree of trust. Among the reasons for the decline in trust that were brought forward were television and the expansion of media coverage, events such as the Vietnam War, Watergate and Enron and a fraying of communities. Ruscio cited

Robert Putnam's book, Bowling Alone: The Collapse and Revival of American Community, and Alexis de Tocqueville's Democracy in America, as books that illustrate how our society and democracy have evolved.

Ciulla, a philosopher and specialist in leadership and ethics, argued that the increased amount of time people spend working affects their ability to join and participate in communal activities. She touched on the role of honesty in promoting trust and stated that today's climate of information availability allows people to know more than ever about a leader's private life.

The audience of nearly 90 individuals included members of the public, representatives of Fairfax Leadership, the Jepson Center, the Library of Virginia and Leadership Metro Richmond.
